

In this issue: There will be another RELaY-conference. In Malta, February 19th- 23rd, 2014. This is the first RELaY conference in the southern part of Europe. The theme is: Church Quo Vadis?

This conference is being jointly hosted by the International Catholic Charismatic Renewal Services (ICCRS), the Youth Fellowship (Malta) and RELaY. The conference is open for everyone who is interested, although young leaders and potential leaders are the aim group.

The previous RELaY-conference was in Ireland in 2012. RELaY-conferences have been a place of connecting and empowering young leaders from which many new initiatives have started. RELaY is a European network which promotes Reconciliation among Christians, the re-Evangelisation of Europe, the formation of Lay Leaders and the mobilization of Youth for the work of the Gospel.

Future Church

What will the future Church in Europe look like and what does that mean for us today? The theme of RELaY 2014 is 'Church Quo Vadis? (Church, where are you going to?)'. In the announcement you read: "The Church in every era faces the dual challenges of fidelity to the two-thousand-year-old Gospel message and at the same time adapting her emphases and methodologies to fulfill the heartfelt longings of people. We need a renewed commitment to (1) forming true disciples of Jesus, (2) empowering young leaders, (3) building a stronger sense of community among God's people and (3) engaging the secular world at the point of need."

These will be some of the themes covered in the 2014 RELaY conference in Malta.

Among the Speakers are Sherry A. Weddell and Andrew Consilgio

Interactive

The conference is in will include workshops and seminar tracks which deal with issues in an interactive environment. The goal of these events is to equip leaders with both practical principles and useful tools. Eva Sido, the young leaders representative in the European sub-committee of ICCRS, wrote: "This will be a great event where we can get together again, learn, share, have fellowship, listen to the Lord, build each-other up. Those of you who have been to previous RELaY events have experienced already how awesome they are. I am sure this one will be another great Conference!"
